In particular, Brüggemann's activities are oriented by the values of integrity and fairness, irrespective of whether its activities take place within or outside Germany.

This Code of Conduct for Suppliers defines Brüggemann's requirements regarding general business principles and fair competition, working and social standards, climate protection and product safety, full compliance with which Brüggemann equally requires of its suppliers and service providers.

The Code of Conduct applies to all suppliers and service providers with whom Brüggemann has a direct business relationship ("Business Partner" or "business partners" in the following).

Responsible Business Practices

1. Compliance with Laws, Recognized Standards and Guidelines

Business Partner hereby commits to upholding all respectively applicable national laws in all its business actions and decisions, and also to upholding the relevant internationally recognized norms, directives and principles, in particular the Principles of United Nations Global Compact, the General Declaration of Human Rights, the Conventions of the United Nations Organization, the core labor standards of the International Labour Organization (ILO), and the OECD Guidelines for Multinational Enterprises. Compliance with this Code of Conduct as well as currently applicable norms and standards shall not be voided by side-agreements such as divergent contractual agreements or any other comparable measures.

2. Prevention of Corruption

Business Partner hereby commits to upholding international and local anticorruption laws and standards. Business Partner shall not attempt, whether in Germany or abroad, to influence its own business partners in a sanctionable manner, for instance through offering, requesting or exchanging gifts, inducements (financial or otherwise), remunerations, benefits or compensations.

3. Antitrust and Competition Law

Business Partner hereby commits to upholding the corresponding national and international antitrust laws, as well as laws against unfair competition. Business Partner hereby commits to upholding the stipulations of applicable data protection and data privacy laws.
